

Who'd say no to a free utilities audit?

Auditel's unique, highly professional cost and purchase management consultancy is helping organisations to reduce financial waste and, as a direct result, to improve their bottom line profits.

Chamber Utility Auditing Service

The cost of doing business in the UK is expensive and is now set to become even more so over the next few years. Most organisations have carried out cost cutting exercises in response to the recent downturn, so what is next?

We would suggest that you talk to our Utility Auditing partner Auditel, one of the leading cost management companies in the UK - they already work with more than 3000 businesses, schools and charities saving them both time and money by ensuring these organisations are not paying more than they should be in many areas of their essential business expenditure.

Impartial, Professional Advice

Auditel are not suppliers, agents or brokers, giving them a completely independent view of the supply chain, so that when they do make recommendations you know that they are both impartial and specific to your organisation.

The good news is that their advice will not cost you another penny, - because Auditel will work with you to lower your costs on a success only basis - making the process entirely self funding.

This is your assurance that your best interests are being served by a genuine win-win relationship and it means that you will benefit from specialist services without risk or the need for upfront investment.

A sustainable and results based approach

Cost Management is very different from Cost Cutting, and so are the results - an effective cost management process is the cornerstone of every successful organisation, irrespective of its size or the prevailing economic climate.

However most "in-house" programmes either fail to cover implementation costs or never get off the ground properly due to the significant upfront investment in time, or lack of expertise and the right tools necessary to deliver both consistent and worthwhile results on a permanent basis.

Again the news is good because with the Auditel "No Savings - No Fee" approach you are able to bring this process into your business without the need to invest additional capital or organisational resources
